Commissioner of Customs and Excise reviews Hong Kong Customs passing-out parade

The Commissioner inspects passing-out officers at the passing-out parade.

The Commissioner of Customs and Excise, Mr Chan Tsz-tat, attended the passing-out parade of 22 Probationary Customs Inspectors and 60 Probationary Customs Officers on 6 February. All graduates marched in with Chinese-style foot drill to form the characters representing the National 15th Five-Year Plan and a pattern of a horse, symbolising that Hong Kong Customs will fully support the HKSAR Government in proactively aligning with the National 15th Five-Year Plan, integrating into and contributing to the overall national development. The patterns also served as wishes of every success and prosperity for the country and Hong Kong in the Year of the Horse.

The Commissioner said in his speech that he was just as excited as the passing-out officers at the same parade ground 31 years ago. He reflected on the transformation of the department over the past three decades: the establishment of new control points, the expansion of the department's strength from over 3,000 to 7,600 officers, the broadening of Customs' role and mission, and the transition from paper-based operations to department-wide digitalisation with the incorporation of artificial intelligence. The Commissioner encouraged the graduates to stay curious, to pursue lifelong learning, to have the courage to step out of their comfort zones, and to embrace challenges in an ever-changing environment.

Office of Information Technology strives to enhance Customs' cyber security

In January, the Assistant Staff Officer of Computer Forensic and Information Technology Security Mr Chan Po-hung received the Merit Award in the Government and Public Bodies sector of the "Cyber Security Professional Awards 2025" on behalf of the department. This accolade recognises OIT's outstanding contribution to enhancing the department's cyber security response capabilities. Besides, the OIT placed emphasis on upskilling the Computer Analysis and Response Team (CART), of which new members successfully passed the assessment administered by the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Security of the Central Government at the end of last year, earning certifications in Digital Investigation and Analytical Skills and significantly enhancing the department's digital investigation capability.

Hong Kong Customs held a reception for the International Customs Day (ICD) 2026 at the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre on 27 January. The reception was officiated by the Financial Secretary, Mr Paul Chan, and the Commissioner of Customs and Excise, Mr Chan Tsz-tat.

Speaking at the reception, Mr Paul Chan, commended Hong Kong Customs for its far-reaching responsibilities and essential service, from facilitating travel and trade and connecting Hong Kong with the world, to law enforcement and safeguarding the well-being of the public. He said that, amid structural changes in the global trade and economic landscape driven by geopolitical shifts, technological transformation and supply-chain realignment, Hong Kong, as the country's southern gateway, and as a "super connector" and "super value-adder", stands to benefit. But it will also face challenges.

Mr Chan added that, under the new circumstances, Hong Kong Customs must continue to evolve. Empowering law enforcement with technologies and strengthening collaboration with Mainland and overseas partners are important for Hong Kong Customs to make greater contributions to international customs co-operation.

In his speech, the Commissioner highlighted the profound and transformative impacts brought by artificial intelligence on daily life, and that Hong Kong Customs has actively applied innovative technologies to enhance trade facilitation and boundary security to foster economic development and safeguard social stability. He also expressed appreciation to colleagues for their commitment to strive for excellence in law enforcement to enhance public well-being. He stressed that Hong Kong Customs will stay committed to being a modern, efficient, and forward-looking law enforcement agency.
